

IDT Collaborative FY 14 Strategic Plan Updates

Strategic Goal: Build capacity to provide optimum practice for young children with behavioral disorders (ADHD, ODD, conduct disorders).

Data Driver: Based on analyses of 2011 – 2012 National Survey of Children’s Health survey data, the parent-reported prevalence of current ADHD was 9.3% in Georgia, which is slightly higher than the national estimate of 8.8%. Nationally, the average parent reported age of ADHD diagnosis among all children with ADHD was 7.0 years of age. The average reported age of ADHD diagnosis among children in GA was 7.5 years of age. The younger the age of diagnosis is typically associated with a more severe form of ADHD, or other behavioral health diagnosis.
