TRAINING ANNOUNCEMENT UPDATE

Behavior 101 Seminar Series: Data Collection & Analysis Training

The goal of this entire seminar series is to improve the skills of behavioral professionals who serve individuals with developmental disabilities. These trainings will serve as a refresher for some professionals and will teach certain competencies to those who did not acquire them through formal education. This component of the series, Data Collection & Analysis Training will teach the participants to:

- Define behavior and data collection
- Identify the importance and types of data collection
- Collect, graph, and analyze data

The training format will be very interactive and involve full participation from those in attendance. Attendees will gain practice implementing each of the skills covered in the training. The training will also involve practice inputting data into Microsoft Excel as well as practice graphing the data. Trainings will take place in a computer lab so this can be accomplished.

This training is designed for behavioral professionals employed by developmental disabilities service providers. Those registering should have already completed basic behavioral training and are responsible for developing behavioral interventions aimed at increasing skills or reducing challenging behaviors. Staff who will be monitoring or overseeing the interventions developed are also invited to attend. However, priority will be given to those individuals directly responsible for behavioral programming as they will benefit the most from this training. Training will begin at 9:00am and end at 12:00pm; sign-in begins at 8:30 am.

The presenters for this training will be behavior analyst staff members from DBHDD's Division of Developmental Disabilities. All are board certified and have training and experience working with individuals with developmental disabilities in a range of settings.
