

Individualized Preference Report Definitions

For Life-Quality and Shopping Programs

Name: _____

Revised: _____

Attempt to produce a Really Liked report in each interval each day.

General Instructions and Definitions

Scoring "Dislike" takes precedence over scoring any other report. "Really Liked" can be scored when it occurs in any part of an interval, but reports of "Liked," "Engaged," or "Unremarkable" are made after the interval is completed. In general, sleep can be given a "Really-Liked" report (1) if sleep is listed as part of the "Really Liked" definition for that person, and (2) it occurs for more than half the interval. Also, eating and drinking 100% of a meal with minimal assistance is generally considered a "Really Liked" report, but this excludes tube feeding.

If a category is scored, but in the judgement of staff it was not related to the activity, "Alternative Explanation" is scored in addition to the person's preference report. For example, if a person showed preference (i.e., really-liked, disliked, liked, engaged, or unremarkable) response to an activity but, in the judgement of the observer, this individual's response was unrelated to the activity, the individual's report would be scored plus "Alternative Explanation."

Individualized Definitions

1. Really Liked: _____

_____.

2. Disliked: _____

_____.

3. Liked: _____

_____.

4. Engaged: _____

_____.

5. Unremarkable: Neither engagement, liked nor disliked reports were appropriate to score during the interval. This has often occurred when the participant felt sick.