Peer Mentor Movement

- Over the past 20-30 years, peer support has expanded and is now recognized as a vital element in an individual's recovery process.
- Peer support has become increasingly integrated into reentry and diversion programs. States including New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oregon, and now Georgia are successfully using forensic peer specialists/forensic peer mentors.
- What is a forensic peer mentor?
 - Individuals with histories of criminal activity and behavioral health needs who help people who are leaving jails or prisons successfully reenter the community
 - Forensic peer mentors are key in interrupting the cycle of recidivism.
 - Unique qualifications: shared, lived experience, credible models of recovery, engagement skills

Forensic Peer Mentorship

The Need for Peer Support within the Criminal Justice System

The U.S. Department of Justice reports that about 16 percent of the population in prisons or jails at any given time has a behavioral health diagnosis, and over the course of one year, approximately 10 million people enter U.S. correctional facilities.

In Georgia, as of September 2014, there were 9,055 people with a mental health diagnosis out of a total of 54,904 incarcerated in the correctional system (about 16 percent). Between July 2013 and January 2014, 730 people were released from the Georgia correctional system with a behavioral health diagnosis.

Forensic peer support would be offered to individuals with psychiatric and/or co-occurring substance abuse diagnoses (level 3 and 4), who are incarcerated and in the transition phase of their preparation for release.

Returning Citizens' Successes

30-year-old female stated that she has a new outlook on life since beginning to work with FPM; she never knew that recovery was possible with mental health and substance abuse; she has been clean for 2 consecutive months for first time.

30-year-old male obtained court ruling in his favor to keep his infant child overnight; he said that the FPM was the only person who believed in him and actually stood up with him on his behalf to go to court and share with the judge the recovery skills that he has gained.

26-year-old female went on her first ever job interview; she said that she was prepared due to the FPM assisting her with filling out job applications, creating a resume, and role-playing in mock interviews.

45-year-old female was able to develop a monthly budget and save up enough money to reinstate her driver's license, which she had not had in 10 years; she is now creating a budget to save up for a used car.

Three returning citizens started certified peer specialist training on June 13, 2016.
